Johannesburg - Investigators have reportedly discovered that a Standard Bank South Africa computer system was hacked in a R300m ATM fraud hit in Japan.

This is according to a report by the Japan News, which was carried by the Chicago Tribune this week.

Last month, it emerged that about 100 people reportedly used forged Standard Bank [JSE:SBK] credit cards to withdraw ¥1.8bn (over R250m) from 1 400 ATMs in Tokyo and other areas in Japan in under three hours.

Standard Bank later confirmed the incident with the bank having estimated that it lost about R300m in the crime.

Standard Bank said there had been no financial loss for customers in the "sophisticated, coordinated fraud incident".

What do the final POPIA regulations deal with?

- How a data subject can object to the processing of their personal information.
- How a data subject can request the correction or deletion of information.
- The responsibilities of an information officer. (Important!)
- How to apply for the regulator to issue a code of conduct.
- How to request marketing consent. (Important!)
- How to submit a complaint to the regulator.
- How the regulator will act as a conciliator in investigations.
- What the regulator must do before it investigates you.
- How the regulator will try to settle complaints.
- How the regulator will conduct assessments.
- How the regulator will notify people during investigations.
